English Words by JUDY SPENCER

Now you're gone, I must spend my life sing-ing the same haunt-ed mel-o-dy. I must learn how to live through the heart-ache, the lone-li-ness left to me While a-gain and a-gain I recall the smile in your eyes that day And the few, hur-ried words of good-bye that you found so eas-y to say. But it's done, and I must start for-you

"Terrace By The Sea"

You and I, we two

Alone ^(here) in this terrace by ^(the) sea

The sun is going down and in your eyes

I see the changing colors of the ~~sea~~ ^{day}

It's time for you to go

The day is done

And shadows stretch ~~their~~ ^{their} arms

~~(to bring the night)~~

The sun falls in the ~~sea~~ ^{night} and down below

A window light we see

Just you and ~~I~~ (me)

You and I, we two

Alone here in this bar with dimming lights

A full 'n rising moon comes from the sea

And soon the ^{wild} bar ^{is} close for you and me

But there will always be a song to tell

~~the same old simple story of desire~~
~~And ^{midnight} that kiss ^{is} that ~~cannot~~ ^{cannot} dismiss~~

But there will always be a song to tell

A story you and I cannot dismiss

That same old simple story of desire

And suddenly that ~~old~~ ^{old} kiss that kiss
